The same is true of a four-room unit. The five-room unit is the smallest individual house that should be built. The six-room house is the best isolated individual unit. 8.--The workingman must pay the price that is necessary for a decent home, and the wage must be sufficient to allow the payment for a decent, economical home. 9.--The large amount of money necessary to support a home-building program demands that the funds shall come from the people who work, and in small units. 10.--The money will be obtained more cheaply directly from the people than from any other source. The demands from the people for use of their money are two: Safety of investment and liquid character of investment. 11.--Cities grow in proportion to the number of families that are satisfied and not in proportion to the birth rate. Rapidly growing cities attract young people, because it is youth which is mobile; therefore, it is incumbent on these cities to provide homes for young people and that is what Bridgeport has done. 12.--Unattractive home units will interest only those with sharp practice and speculative plans in mind. The attractive home interests both those who are in the employer class and those who are in the employee class. The many visitors to the Bridgeport project is evidence of this influence. Simplicity and good taste are fast taking the place of extraneous frills. The growth of this new style will be made...
