On special occasions, such as inaugural ceremonies, or similar events of general interest, special editions are prepared and ready for delivery by the time the rural brother could come into possession of the details. In fact. I am informed that the system of manufacturing and delivering plate matter is so thorough that fully two thirds of the smaller dailies are made up in this way, except in local news and editorials. We note w th pride the full and complete make-up in the various departments of our metropolitan contemporaries, and remark upon their enterprise in giving to their readers a veritable encyclopedia in the form of a newspaper. But all of these various departments are made up almost exclusively of plate matter. In this age of progress in plate matter, the country editor, without mental effort, can publish a...
