Excerpt: . . . Chapter II. TEMPERANCE CONVENTIONS. The 18th seemed a long, dreary day, anxious as I felt to go forward. At the proper time I left Boston, arriving safe at the end of my journey on Friday morning, the 19th. A happy meeting was ours. when I stood on the pier at New York, holding the hands of my daughter and her husband. Soon as the excitement of our meeting passed off, I began to talk about the Temperance Convention, which had been advertised to commence on the 2nd of September, and to which I had been delegated by five Societies in England, namely, Wakefield, the place of my residence; Whitehaven, near my native place, and where I had resided above twenty years; Liverpool Females Society, Preston Band of Hope Society, beside a letter of recommendation from Mr. Joseph Livesy, belonging to the Parent Society at...
