His two grand sermons in his sixth volume-- Christ the Son of God made Man and The Incarnate Son a Sufferer and a Sacrifice, may be pointed out as two splendid illustrations of Newman s incomparable power of making the highest doctrines imaginatively to abide with us, and to abide full of the most homiletical and most home-coming expositions and applications. As to Newman s two novels, --it goes without saying that both Loss and Gain and Callista contain brilliant and memorable passages. Callista, especially, contains not a few pages that are entirely classical. The description of the scene where the work is laid; the oftquoted locust-passages; and the conversation on Tartarus held between Caecilius and Callista, --a passage that William Law himself might have written; and, I am not sure that even Newman would ever have written those masterly pages, unless William Law had written on the same subject before him. As to the trustworthiness of Callista, --when the critics charge its author with violating historical truth, and with the importation of Popish developments of doctrine and life into a third century sketch, Newman frankly admits the charge. Indeed, he cannot deny it. This is how he defends himself from a similar charge in his / advertisement to The Church of the Fathers: It is plain that as to the matter of...
